Dear Friends of the Library,

Los Angeles Public Library begins a new chapter on Monday, May 3, with limited in-person services at the Central Library and 37 branch libraries. During this phase of our rolling reopening process, the number of patrons allowed in the libraries will be limited and social distancing and masks will be required. Friends will not be permitted in the library to perform volunteer work. Onsite used book sales are still suspended and branch library bookstores will not be open until further notice.

We look forward to welcoming our Friends back as soon as it's safe to do so. Please continue to take advantage of our virtual volunteer opportunities. In the meantime, please drop by one of the 38 reopening libraries to say hello and check out materials!

For more information, please contact your library's senior librarian or visit lapl.org/reopening.

As always, we appreciate your time, contribution and support of LAPL and fellow Angelenos.

Kind regards,
